Appendix 11

Investigation Recording 11, there were only five cases of organ donation in the entire city of Shanghai during almost two years.

Subject of Investigation: A staff member of the Red Cross Society's organ donation office in Huangpu District, Shanghai

Date: December 17, 2015 (Phone number: 86-63365880)

(Recording: MP3)

Investigator: So Red Cross Society's organ donation center in Huangpu District, Shanghai has received many donations?

Red Cross staff: Not many at the moment. There are (several). We began the pilot project last year.

Investigator: You started doing it this year?

Investigator: Which month of last year?

Red Cross staff: Which month of last year? The city assigned the work (to us). The high-ups started assigning the work at the beginning of last year.

Investigator: How many cases of organ donation have been made so far?

Red Cross staff: There are actually only five cases of organ donation in Shanghai.

Investigator: We actually only have five cases in Shanghai, right?

Red Cross staff: Yes, actually only five cases.

Investigator: So five cases of liver or kidney donation, or corneas? How many cases are registered at your office?

Red Cross staff: Very few registered cases, which have special conditions. It is not that I want to donate my organ and then I can immediately donate it. So usually, it would be a car accident, or someone dying in the hospital, then they would donate their organs. Now in China, it is unlike in foreign countries. If there is a traffic accident in a foreign country, if the person involved is a (registered) organ donor, his/her organs can be donated immediately.

Investigator: How many successful organ donations have been realized? In your district?

Red Cross staff member: Only five cases in the entire city.

Investigator: Only five cases in the entire city. People rarely donate organs, here in Shanghai.

Red Cross Staff: Not so many here, only a few cases per year. For those who had filled in the (organ donation) form, the person cannot donate, when still being alive and healthy.
